

Torre Sibilla is a medieval tower placed in the Umbria-Marches Apennines. Once in ruins, it now stands against the Gola dell'Infernaccio (Hell's Gorge) and is a fascinating, elegant and evocative place.

It is located in an outstanding natural cradle surrounded by the Sibilla, Queen of the Apennines, and the Priora mountains. Both of them charming and evocative, the former has always been related to lively magical stories and legends, the latter - a mountain sleeping in the middle of its forests - is a place of worship and prayer characterized by several sanctuaries, hermitages, and cloisters.

The current owners came across Torre Sibilla about two decades ago.

It was in a dignified but deteriorated state, completely abandoned, bound by moss, lichens, thorns, and shrouded in mystery. It was a sudden, strong, intense and emotional love. Since the very beginning, they decided to restore it to its original beauty and grandeur: no more as a strategic post, but as a haven for mind and body, a place to "find oneself" and meditate, ...to "find oneself" and meet up with friends.

The Tower has acquired a new beauty, it is the centre of a system of trails, which is going to be the focus of "SIBILLARTE", a project dealing with the creation of 2,5 km of natural tracks and historic untouched areas with an artistic accent.

Beautiful landscape, interior elegance and comfort, and the traditional welcome make Torre Sibilla the ideal place to discover the Marche Region.
